CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION

A baby is born into this world as an entirely blank canvass. Over the years, as the child grows it picks up cues from its environment on how to act. A child will absorb its environment and shape itself to that environment. A child's view of the world is already subject to corruption because their parents (or guardian) were shaped by their environment too. If teachers are added into the mix, who are repeating what they have been taught to teach then it can be suggested that a child is brainwashed and that this process has gone on since the child first entered the world. The system that governs lives, and that everyone is intrinsically part of was not of anybody's individual choosing, it is a construct that many, perhaps even everyone alive today had no part in building and have been given little choice in renouncing.

An old Jesuit maxim states "Give me the child for the first seven years and I will give you the man". Renowned Militant Atheist and Evolutionist Professor Richard Dawkins (2006: 177) cites James Dobson "Those who control what young people are taught, and what they experience...will determine the future course of the nation".

The meaning of this is clear; The formative years of our lives are the most important, they mould who we are as people and gives us the sense of who and what we are? This perception of self is now being challenged by the psychological phenomenon NLP (Neuro-Linguistic Programming) a system of re-programming the mind which argues that our ideas of who we think we are false and limiting.

"By choosing where to focus your attention you influence your perception of the world at large. You only have to think of the glass as half full rather than half empty to shift your state, your emotions and your pleasure in life significantly"

Knight (1999:10)

Conspiracy theories have often been a prime subject for film-makers and authors, dystopian novels such as Aldous Huxley's Brave New World and George Orwell's 1984 are prime examples of how the world is perceived by the conspiracy theorist. In the 1980s there was the U.S television series V about an invading race of lizard-like aliens secretly taking over the world, the same subject was addressed in John Carpenter's They Live where an alien race again was covertly taking over the planet, using methods of subconscious brainwashing to keep human-kind asleep and unaware of this dastardly plot. So this idea of being controlled by an elite group is nothing new to us, however it is something that the masses have simply discarded as being in the realms of science fiction.

There have always been conspiracy theories ranging through a variety of subjects from the alleged UFO crash in Roswell, New Mexico in 1947 to the assassination of President John F Kennedy in Dallas, 1963 through to doubt over the 1969 Moon landings. Likewise there have always been conspiracy theorists and a minority of people who have sought to espouse an alternative view of world history but they have often been ridiculed and deemed as not playing with a full deck.

This attitude to anyone who steps away from the normality of what is perceived in everyday life was demonstrated none more infamously than when the former Coventry goalkeeper, sports presenter and Green Party M.P David Icke announced to Terry Wogan and the Great British public on the BBC chat show Wogan that he was the son of God and that our collective thoughts affected the reality we experience, for this he was openly and chronically ridiculed. An experience that Icke claims was the making of him. It shows the change in the attitudes of many people when over 20 years later there was a TV documentary on mainstream terrestrial television titled David Icke: Was he right?

There is also now a television channel called Edge Media Television, it is featured as part of the Sky Satellite package and is dedicated to providing a platform for alternative viewpoints than to what we are privvy in the mainstream media. So what has been the catalyst for this change of public consciousness?

On September 11th 2001 it was alleged that 19 members of the purported terrorist network Al Qaida armed with box cutters Hijacked 4 planes, flew two into the World Trade Centre's Twin Towers in New York City, another into the side of the Pentagon building in Washington D.C and a further plane crashing in Pennsylvania after its passengers overpowered the Hijackers. Shortly after this historic event the U.S Government quietly passed the U.S Patriot Act that gives the U.S Government Orwellian like powers.

“The final version of the Patriot Act that was passed into law was rewrittten between midnight and 8 o’clock in the morning behind closed doors by a few unknown people...It was hundreds of pages long, and no member of congress could tell you what they were voting for in its entirety... and who wanted to be against the USA Patriot Act at a time like that”

Peter Defazio (cited in Finnegan & Solomon. 2006: 50)

The act allowed for powers that broadly applied could be used to silence dissident government voices such as anti-war protestors.

A documentary credited to the director Dylan Avery titled Loose Change became widely available over the internet and spread rapidly. The film gave an alternative version of the events of 9/11 and posed many interesting questions implying that the official version of the events of that fateful day was a lie and that it was an inside job. Loose Change is one of many ‘investigative’ documentaries on the subject of 9/11, the related concept of the New World Order, Illuminati and the insinuation of a long lost hidden knowledge that the majority of the world are kept from through the actions of this elite.

A film claimed to riddled with so many inaccuracies and misinformation that it prompted one author to label it

“perhaps the most factually challenged documentary I’ve ever seen...This is an amateurish piece of panic-peddling nonsense riddled with half-truths, rehashed rumors, and implausible innuendo”

Roeper (2008:6)

Although the fan's of such Documentaries are adamant that they serve a purpose, even when 'debunked'. It is doubtful that these claims of elite groups running the world to a nefarious agenda in order to serve their own selfish gains can be disproved or verified at this time but the evidence for the probability of such a system can be analysed and from this it can be determined whether the mass majority of people have a right to be informed of these extreme possibilities that may or may not be affecting their lives, it is surely only fuelling speculation when these ideas are completely ignored by the mainstream media, the general public should be allowed to make their own informed choice as opposed to being forced fed one version of reality that may or may not be valid.

Chapter 2: The Illuminati will outline the all-encompassing conspiracy theory of an elite secret society known as the Illuminati and their ultimate goal of a New World Order including the possible motives behind these measures. An analysis of why this particular theory dominates the landscape of all conspiracy theory will be performed and questions will be addressed as to whether these reasons have any strength, and if there is any possibility of these conspiracies being based on just ten percent fact then surely the public should be made aware of this?

Chapter 3: Origins explores the historical and geographical beginnings of where this ultimate conspiracy began, as put forward by contemporary proponents of these theories, focusing mainly on David Icke, who is at the very extreme end of the scale of conspiracy theory and has little credibility academically. Unfortunately with a subject of this nature in order to get the alternative view point these are the only types of people that it is possible to turn to, many are considered to be at the very least misguided but since the aim of this project is to seek out supposedly suppressed views it will be impossible to avoid.

Chapter 4: The Fabric of Reality looks at the more conventional and credible resources using primarily the writings of Media Theorist Noam Chomsky as well as looking at more contemporary texts that will be studied in order to evaluate if anything can be determined one way or the other as hard fact or are these conspiracy allegations entirely without substance?

A discussion on the symbology inherent in these ideas will be explored in Chapter 5: Symbols and Coincidences, with Chapter 6: Do You Want to Know a Secret being dedicated to the methodology used in the first hand research conducted and the findings of this research. In Chapter 7: Conclusion, the evidence collated from all the previously examined sources shall be scrutinised and a judgement made on whether there is anything for the public to be concerned about and whether they would be interested anyway and will feature the conclusions made from the body of research that has been looked at along with the results of the quantitative information collated.

CHAPTER 2: THE ILLUMINATI

Where the Illuminati (meaning ‘the illuminated or enlightened ones’) began their quest for world dominance is much debated, even in conspiracy circles. Some conspiracy theorists believe that the Illuminati are simply cold-hearted businessmen who value money above all else, others believe that this elite have Satanic affiliations, whilst others buy into the belief that they are a shape-shifting reptilian race that transcend our normal three dimensions and are able to move in and out of the concepts we know as time and space, whilst some others believe all of the above.

So if there is no consensus with regard to who they are or what they are then where can an analysis begin in trying to establish if they are? The question is explored, firstly by investigating the elements of the theories which appear to be common within all diversities of the conspiracy theory allegations.

The Illuminati are, it is at least unanimously agreed among the purveyors of these ideas, the hidden totalitarian hegemonic power behind all of the world’s governments, banks, multi-national corporations and organised religions. Through the media it is decided what is read, watched and heard, and subsequently to a large extent thought control is exerted.

If this is an impressive resume then what follows is sure to provoke gasps of awe: According to Icke (1995) The Illuminati have by all accounts shaped the landscape of the world for hundreds of thousands of years. The documentary Zeitgeist claims they have been responsible for practically every major war and man-made disaster since the American Civil War through to the attack on the World Trade Centre on the 11th September 2001 and beyond. Here the investigation will go into a little more depth on the ideas outlined above.

World Governments

It is believed that since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on 22nd November 1963 for which they are responsible, there has not been a President in the White House who has not been under the control of the Illuminati. The world leaders that are given the job as front men are carefully chosen via a vetting process, it is believed that this is conducted via invitation to a private club known as the Bilderberg Group, the nature of which will be explained in greater depth in Chapter 5. Many current world figures are known to have attended Bilderberg meetings prior to becoming their prominent political figures

“Henry Kissinger, Bill Clinton and Tony Blair have all attended (Tony Blair first attended in 1993, before he became leader of the Labour Party and then Prime Minister of the UK).” (Streeter 2008:165) in the recent documentary The Obama Deception it is noted that during the time that a Bilderberg meeting was taking place in the run up to the Presidential Elections of 2008 that both Senator Hilary Clinton and now President Barack Obama went missing for three days. This coincidence is enough to convince conspiracy theorists that both were in attendance at the Bilderberg meeting during this time, the icing on the conspiratorial cake was that Obama was scheduled to board a plane full of journalists but the plane apparently took off without then Senator Obama and had the journalists trapped within the plane.

Revelations revealing that Senator Obama is distant cousins to Dick Cheney also fuelled the flames. It is believed by conspiracy theorists that the election of Senator Obama to the position of President was to create the illusion of real change after 8 years of disenchantment under George W. Bush.

Banks

Almost at the pinnacle of the conspiratorial hierarchy are the Banks, or rather one in particular; The United States Federal Reserve affectionately known as The Fed. This is the central bank of the United States of America; it has the monopoly over the issuance of money in the United States and is a privately owned bank.

The bank was founded in 1913 in order to stabilise the country’s economy, the destabilisation of which was the result of manipulation by private bankers in order to crash the country’s economy and instigate the creation of a private central bank which would be put into being so as to prevent any future crashes. Unfortunately this wasn't the case, again due to the manipulation of the economy in the eyes of the conspiracy theorist. The great depression arrived in 1929 following the wealthy flamboyance of the roaring twenties. Why were they so roaring though? Conspiracy theorists have the answer; it was due in the main to the proliferation of margin loans, these loans allowed people to purchase stock at just a third of its value, borrowing the other two thirds. The central bank thus began calling in the loans sending everyone to the wall and further consolidating their assets. Congressman Louis McFadden cited in The Robots Rebellion said the crash

“was not accidental. It was a carefully contrived occurrence... The International Bankers sought to bring about conditions of despair here, so they might emerge rulers of us all”

McFadden (cited in Icke. 1995)

This is also explained in the documentary Zeitgeist and goes on to say that evolving from this state of affairs was derived the gold seizure of 1933. This was a legislated confiscation of all the countries gold, the thinking in this is that without a gold standard then there would be no limits on how much money could be printed.

This brings us to today and the current global financial crisis that is being faced. Yet again this has been cleverly contrived by the Illuminati say conspiracy theorists via the known outcome of sub-prime lending; that is lending to clients who realistically cannot afford to keep up payments and are likely to default. Zeitgeist was released in 2007 and warns of an upcoming financial crisis.

Multi-national Corporations

In bed with the banking dynasties are the corporate billionaires. It is through their wealth that they have attained power, much like the bankers. According to the documentary The Corporation businesses have been awarded the same legal status as human beings, therefore a corporation can assume blame and responsibility for the actions it undertakes without the directors, employees or shareholders necessarily having any individual liability. The corporations are given rights of normal persons but claims Professor Noam Chomsky in the documentary “special kinds of persons; persons who have no moral conscience...designed by law to only be concerned for their stock holders". This lack of morality within corporations and the companies commitment to their shareholders ensures that by the nature of the concept of business they will almost always strive to increase production and minimise their overheads, this will inevitably end in decisions made being based on economic rather than ethical motives.

Organised Religions

The belief that religions are devised, or at the very least encouraged by the Illuminati as distractions is a popular one. A main tenet of this belief is the idea that Christianity is a blatantly false fairy tale and it is pointed out by conspiracy proponents that there have been many solar deities, of which Jesus is simply the latest in a long line. It is proposed that the stories of these deities contain a great deal of the same characteristics as those of the Jesus story, the main distinction being that Jesus came after. The Egyptian Sun God Horus shares many similar characteristics to the Jesus story.

Pic 2. Horus

“It is certain...that the lord or Christ of Marcion is entirely non-historical. He has no geneology or Jewish line of descent, no earthly mother, no father, no mundane birthplace or human birth.”

Massey (cited in Cutner. 2000:173)

It is put forward convincingly that the Jesus story like those that came before it is purely and entirely allegorical; describing astrological phenomenon as opposed to any happenings on earth. Icke on the other hand believes that Jesus was an historical figure, but is not the son of god as depicted, merely a political activist and he agrees that the myth surrounding Jesus is almost entirely false. He believes that Jesus lived and bore children and died in either France or India.

“I believe the Roman Catholic Church know that Jesus did not die on the cross and have done so for at least 1500 years. They have suppressed this knowledge to protect their own power”

Icke (1995:98)

CHAPTER 3: ORIGINS

In this chapter a brief overview shall be outlined of where some of the theories regarding where these conspiracies originate from. There are a variety of theories; some that take the Illuminati story back hundreds of thousands of years ago, but in the interests of brevity the story shall begin just under a thousand years ago in 1095 after Pope Urban II launched a crusade on Jerusalem, in around at 1119 at the suggestion of two of the original Knight's Godfrey de Saint Omer and Hugues de Payen The Poor Fellow Soldiers of Christ and of the Temple of Solomon was founded in order to protect the thousands of Christian Pilgrims that visited Jerusalem.

“They were a monastic military order created from a group of just nine knights... The Knights had no money of their own, no uniform – their clothes were donated – and they were constantly short of both new recruits and equipment”

Hodge (2006:10)

It was said they occupied the Al Aqsa mosque which they had captured, referring to it as Solomon's Temple as it was said to be built on the Temple Mount where the original Temple of Solomon had been located; it is believed the Knights excavated beneath the Mount in order to dig up holy artifacts, these artifacts eventually ended up in Paris the home of the Knight's Templar after the holy land was taken back in the latter stages of the 1100s by the Muslim leader Saladin.

Amongst the relics and artifacts uncovered by the Knight's Templar were rumoured to be the arc of covenant and the holy grail, although it is hotly debated on what the grail actually was; some claim it to be the chalice that Jesus Christ used at his last meal the night before he was supposedly captured, another train of thought is that it is the blood line of Jesus rather than an actual vessel with the French San Greal (Holy Grail) and Sang Real (Holy Blood) it is easy to see where this confusion has arisen. A further idea is the proposal that the Holy Grail is purely an allegorical term for a great secret that the Knight's discovered, again through their excavations, in any case no concrete proof exists that any of these theories are correct.

We fast forward to 1307 and the highly secretive order of the Knight's Templar are charged with heresy by King Phillippe VI of France. It is widely believed that the King owing monies to the order and believing with the wars in the holy land over that the Knight's had outlived there purpose so accusations of financial corruption, sodomy and idolatory of a cat where directed at then Grandmaster of the order Jaques de Molais and his knights. At this time the Knight's Templar had attained land, assets, and had accumulated vast wealth through numerous manufacturing businesses, banking activities and importing and export dealings, they could arguably be considered the first multi-national corporation.

After confessions were extracted from the Knight's admitting the charges brought against them, albeit under duress of torture, the command came for all monarchs to strip their relative orders which had basis throughout Europe, of their wealth and assets and arrest all Templar Knights. Jacque de Molay along with a number of his order were put to death. However when Phillippe went to retrieve the Knight's wealth he found nothing, the Knight's fleet along with their wealth had disappeared into thin air.

It is believed that the Knight's had a sympathiser in the then King of Scotland; Robert the Bruce and many conspiracy theorists believe that Freemasonry, having its earliest roots located in Scotland and the claim that William de St Clair, founder of Rosslyn Chapel which allegedly has connections to the Knight's Templar and Freemasonry was the son of Hugues de Payen, the original Grandmaster of the Knight's Templar. It is from this link that the Freemasons are thought to have infiltrated the highest positions of power.

Pic 3. Robert the Bruce: Harbinger of the Knights Templar?

Rosslyn Chapel has many wood carvings within its walls that resemble various plants indigenous to North America that weren't introduced into Europe until much later, allowing fertile ground for suspicions that the Templars had discovered America secretly hundreds of years before Christopher Columbus. What is illustrated in Guardian of the Holy Grail is that “Prince Henry St Clair set sail for America in 1398, nearly one hundred years before the pivotal voyage of Christopher Columbus. Accompanying him were more than 200 sailors and passengers including Templar Knights”

Pinkham (2006:226)

It is known that the first incumbent of the United States Presidency was George Washington, an acknowledged Freemason who commissioned the street layout for Washington D.C which is rife with what is perceived as Masonic and Pagan symbology.

The United States was officially founded in 1776 which coincides with the formation of a secret society in Ingolstadt, Bavaria called the Perfectibilists which later became known as the Illuminati, the significance of this date will be made clear in Chapter 5. Founded by a German Philosopher called Adam Weishaupt the aims of the society where the proposition of a New World Order which in practice would mean the dissolution of all religious and monarchical governments. It is claimed in some circles that they were behind the French Revolution. After the Bavarian government banned all secret societies in 1784 Weishaupt was exiled from Bavaria in 1785. It is thought the order went underground. It is known that Adam Weishaupt was also a Freemason and was inducted into a Munich lodge in 1777. Whilst in exile he was under the protection of Duke Ernst II of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg, a direct descendent of Queen Elizabeth II the current monarch of the United Kingdom. It is easy to understand how such facts fuel the flames of conspiracy.

CHAPTER 4: THE FABRIC OF REALITY

Whilst the idea of a concerted effort to enslave the world's masses in a diabolical plot stretching back hundreds of thousands of years is not on the agenda of credible Media Theorists or writers such as Noam Chomsky there does still appear to be a belief in a definite power behind the throne as it were.

Who or what this power actually is has also more or less been brought to a consensus and despite the idea of there being a definite conspiratorial timeframe and who is actually behind the agenda there is not much difference between the ideas proposed by the conspiracy theorists or those in academia.

In Manufacturing Consent Noam Chomsky proposes a propaganda model which consists of a system of filters that perhaps even inadvertently; if we're being generous, controls and limit the information that is afforded through the mainstream media. The theory he underlines is based on five filters, these are:

1. Size, Ownership and Profit Orientation of the Mass Media
2. The Advertising License to do Business
3. Sourcing Mass-Media News
4. Flak and the Enforcers
5. Anti-Communism as a Control Mechanism.

These filters will be explained in brief, sequentially; the first filter is in regard to who initially was able to start up the media empires that have been built today. The cost of starting up in the media industry even over a hundred years ago was way beyond the capabilities of most so it is almost a pre-requisite to have enormous wealth to begin with, the media conglomerates today number approximately just five. That's five parent companies that give us almost all the information that is in the public arena today. A large proportion of the people connected to these media behemoths tend to have connections with banks, governments or multi-national corporations or a combination thereof. This should be construed as a major conflict of interest.

The infiltration of advertising into the media provided the secondary filter in Chomsky's theory; the idea that advertising revenue determines to a great extent information output. Chomsky illustrates the beginning of newsprint media being determined by production costs, this allowed all publications to compete on the same level playing field, however including advertisements in your newspaper meant that it was possible to now have the cover price at a much lower cost than needed to for the costs of production due to the additional money brought in through advertising, and advertisers would naturally prefer to showcase their products in publications that were sympathetic to capitalist interests. This turn of events sent a number of working class, left-wing newspapers to the wall.

Time has only increased the power that advertising can and does have on a media outlet's output. In just one example there is the infamous case of the late stand-up

Pic 4. Bill Hicks on Letterman in 1993

comedian Bill Hicks on the late show with David Letterman in the mid-nineties "became the first comedy act to be censored at CBS's Ed Sullivan theatre" (Kauffman 1997:113) due to one of his jokes making fun of pro-life Christians, it turned out that in the ad-break there was a pro-life Christian advertisement and it can be assumed that it would not have been good business to allow a criticism of one of your shows sponsors to be aired, although with over a decade gone by in recent months Bill Hicks' set has been aired with David Letterman issuing an apology and claiming he did not know why he had decided to remove it from the show.

The third filter in the propaganda model discusses where the Media attain their news from. This is arguably the most important filter and most open to corruption. Chomsky argues that due again to costs and commitments to filling copy or airtime it is not economical to wait for a news story to happen or to have reporters stationed at venues where something just 'might' occur, so in this respect they are at the mercy of press offices and officials who tell the reporters what is happening, David Icke concurs with this school of thinking as he explained in the channel 5 programme David Icke: Was he right? “This system is controlled by what I call repeaters... and the great repeaters are what pass for journalists”.

The fourth stage of this filtering process has been blatantly evident within the past decade in the United States over the Presidential elections in particular of 2000 and 2008. In 2000 Al Gore and his Democrat party capitulated in a fight to recount the votes in the highly dubious and hotly disputed election due to massive amounts of flak generated by the Bush camp whilst most recently in the 2008 election presidential runner Ron Paul appeared to be censored by much of the main stream media after it was evident he was building a strong following, albeit predominantly via the internet. This censorship not only came in the form of not allowing the candidate proportionate media coverage but also on the rare occasions he was mentioned it was often accompanied by policy and character assassination as well as ridicule.

This perceived censorship could of course refer to what Michael Shermer calls our knowledge filter, in other words our own belief in what is correct and what is incorrect, the reliability of the source as well as what is learned from collective experience.

“Think of the knowledge filter as a mental module that screens incoming ideas for their veracity. It works by comparing new facts and ideas with what we already know from previous experiences... Newspapers, magazines, radio, and television networks have journalistic standards and ethics that ask the same sorts of questions our personal knowledge filters ask”

Shermer (electronic journal. 2009)

Isn't this what Chomsky and Icke are asking people to be more discerning about? To remind the masses not to blindly accept what is reported by supposedly trusted outlets by virtue of mere tradition.

The final filter is the Anti-Communist filter, it is suggested that whether or not there is any truth to it, that the mere implication of someone said to be holding communist ideals is grounds for fear and resultantly censorship of opinion. It is through these tiers of filtration Chomsky insists that the United States have been able to escape the spotlight of the press in regard to their highly questionable attitudes towards foreign policy, particularly in Central and South America. In effect the belief that the media is complicit in its own censorship appears to be disregarded with the idea that the press believes itself to be bipartisan even if it is not.

His opinion differs again when it comes to the Conspiracy Theorists version of events of 11th September 2001. Whilst they are adamant in their belief that there is something fundamentally wrong with the Bush administrations' version of what happened, Chomsky is of the viewpoint that it is the foreign policies adopted by U.S Governments since the 1960s that led to 9/11 and whilst it was almost beyond doubt the Bush administration took advantage of the tragedy it was unlikely they would have the competence to be involved in pulling off such a high profile scam of the American people.

“As many other countries, the government used the occasion of the terrorist atrocities of 9-11 to discipline its own population...The Bush administration claimed, and exercised, the right to declare people – including US citizens – to be ‘enemy combatants’ or ‘suspected terrorists’ and to imprison them without charge or access to lawyers or family until the White House determines that it’s ‘war on terror’ has been successfully concluded: that is, indefinitely.”

Chomsky (2004:26)

There are arguments over the semantics of an introduction of a new world order, globalisation, one world government or a dominating world state but the consensus is that there is a desire amongst the powerful to bring into being a unified world power which will ultimately have overall control of the earth and be uncontestable in its strength as International affairs specialist John Ikenberry is quoted as saying

“The new imperial grand strategy presents the United States [as] a revisionist state seeking to parlay its momentary advantages into a world order in which it runs the show”

Ikenberry (cited in Chomsky. 2004:11).

We are the World

According to conspiracy documentaries such as Zeitgeist an important step in the agenda is allegedly a plan to unite Canada, Mexico and the United States under a single umbrella state of the North American Union (NAU) alongside this each country would lose their sovereignty

“[I]t is really about America trying to get its hands on the resources of Mexico and Canada--in particular, the energy resources of Mexico... The American economy is dying and it is trying to extend its tentacles by grabbing [the] resources of its two closest neighbors”

Manila Standard (electronic journal: 2008)

a new currency would be introduced called the Amero which will replace the Canadian Dollar, American Dollar and the Mexican Peso much in the same way as has happened in Europe, beginning with the European Economic Community and ending in what is now called the European Union (E.U) and just like is allegedly being proposed with the Americas the majority of European countries have given up their respective national currencies in favour of a European Monetary Unit, the single currency known as the Euro. The implication from this is that with there already being both a Central Asian Union and an African Union that it won't be too long before these four unions unite to create a One World Government and by the likelihood of economic survival any remaining countries would have to fall in line.

Apportioned a chip

There is a fear within conspiracy circles that there is an aim to rid the world of paper money and paper information, perhaps under the cloak of environmental worries which are also believed to be highly exaggerated, replacing them with purely digitised currency and information. It could be argued that this began with the introduction of debit and credit cards, and more recently the concept of the compulsory identification cards. The next step would be a compulsory implantable chip claim the mistrusting conspiracy theorists and thus in order to deal with any dissidents or objectors it would just be a matter of turning off the chip rendering the subject helpless and unable to buy food, clothing and unable to prove their identity.

source: Documentary: Freedom to Fascism

The idea of such a system appears to be far fetched and out of the realms of rational thought, however what has been proven is that this technology is available now and that a number of people have volunteered to act as guinea pigs for the chips. Suspicion is further increased with the fact that at the forefront of the Radio Frequency Identification (R.F.I.D) technology is IBM, who are suspected of knowingly supplying the Nazi's with the means of identifying and keeping track of Jews during the Third Reich.

“IBM's Hollerith punch-card machines were used by Nazi Germany to advance it's war efforts... [and] performed a number of important tasks for Nazi Germany, including... counting for the 1933 German census that provided the Nazis with important information about where Jews were living, their family history and their professions... IBM technology was also use to expedite deportation to concentration camps”

Michalowski & Kramer (2006:123)

It is in the face of these questionable moral standards in history that the conspiracy gains credence.

Hegemony

The all pervading belief is that the country is not ruled by those who are voted into government but rather they themselves answer to an unseen unelected body of government that is mastering the elite agenda behind the scenes. These unelected bodies are numerous and interlinked. There are accusations that the United Nations, the Bilderberg Group, the Council on Foreign Relations, Tri-lateral Commission, The Club of Rome and Chatham House are the actual power behind the Global agenda and it is considered that these are possibly the ominously titled Illuminati. All bar the United Nations are described as non-partisan, non-governmental think tanks where as the U.N has an official capacity in world affairs.

That one alleged Illuminati figurehead David Rockefeller appears to be heavily involved in a number of these organisations; namely the Council of Foreign Relations, Tri-lateral Commission and the Bilderberg Group should also be of interest to the general public. There are a number of comments attributed to Rockefeller that appear to support the idea that the world is heading for a 'new world order' that first appeared in the public consciousness when George H.W. Bush used the phrase in 1991.

“For more than a century ideological extremists at either end of the political spectrum have seized upon well-publicized incidents such as my encounter with [Fidel] Castro to attack the Rockefeller family for the inordinate influence they claim is wielded over American political and economic institutions. Some even believe we are part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and me as "internationalists" and of conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure--one world, if you will. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it.”

David Rockefeller (cited in electronic journal: Jasper. 2006)

Surely if these organisations have a large amount of influence in shaping the future of the world then the people deserve to be informed of this and also any plans or suggestions by these non-elected bodies given mainstream media attention. The Bilderberg Group according to their own statements is not a secret society it is a private forum where people meet out of the glare of the public spotlight.

CHAPTER 5: SYMBOLS AND COINCIDENCES

It is deemed by the conspiracy theorists that the Illuminati hold a great deal of importance in symbols and for this reason the world is littered with their signage, if only people know where to look. In this section just three of the many symbols and their alleged inherent meaning will be examined.

The Pyramid and the All-seeing Eye

The most well known of the Illuminati symbols appears on the one dollar bill, along with a whole host of Illuminati symbolism. On the left hand side of the bill there is what is known as The Great Seal of the United States. It features an eye within a triangle atop an unfinished pyramid. This eye to the conspiracy theorists is the all-seeing eye (of Horus) and is supposed to represent the enlightened few at the top with the pyramid representative of the masses under their control below. The words Annuet Coeptis is written above and is translated to 'favours undertakings' the source of this motto is from Virgil's Georgics book 1 line 40 and the full context of which is cited in website ? as "Da facilem cursum, atque audacibus annue coeptis" or in English "Give me an easy course, and favor my daring undertakings." At the base of the pyramid is MDCCLXXVI the Roman numerals for 1776 the year of founding of the United States of America and 'coincidentally' say the conspiracy theorists the year Adam Weishaupt's Bavarian Illuminati was established. The three pairs of letters at the beginning middle and end of the Roman numerals; DC, LX, VI are said to represent the number 600, 60 and 6 which to all fans of the Omen totals 666., beneath the pyramid is another motto 'Novus Ordo Seclorum' literally translated as 'New Order of the Ages'. This according to Icke (1995) "refers to the Brotherhood's 'Great Work of the Ages' and it is expressed today as The New World Order." The eye also appears in Freemasonry which the conspiracy rhetoric casts suspicions on the relationship between the U.S government and Freemasonry, this is apparently also encoded in the M in Seclorum, A in Annuet, S in Coeptis, the last O in Ordo and the N in Novus, these letters are pointed to when you draw an identical size triangle upside down over the other triangle to make a six-pointed star, the points of the star direct you to the letters required to spell out MASON albeit in anagram form, where as author John Laurence Reynolds disagrees there's any connection to the Freemasons

“The eye represents the all-seeing vision of God, nothing more, and whilst it is indeed framed within a triangle, triangular shapes have been popular among Christian societies for centuries, representing the trinity of the father, the son and the holy spirit”

Reynolds (2006: 62)

There are also claims that the 13 levels of the Pyramid is a time scale or schedule with 13 years to establish a new goal in the plan of world domination beginning in 1776 milestones that fit this pattern include the French Revolution, The Crimean War and the conclusion of World War II (source: Awadalla. 2004:53-54).

Bohemian Grove

Bohemian Grove is a kind of holiday camp for the most powerful men in the world if you believe the official story. If you adopt the conspiracy perspective then it's another chance for World Leaders to get together and plot the course of world events. It is an annual event held in California by The Bohemian Club, of which all manner of world luminaries are members. At the centre of this controversy is the secrecy surrounding the event, as with The Bilderberg Group no media are sent to cover the event. The controversy over this includes a ceremony where 'mock' human sacrifices are offered to a giant Owl statue. This Owl, another symbol of enlightenment or wisdom appears a number of times, such as in the street layout of Washington D.C sat atop a Pyramid and on the logo of the National Press Club and is also claimed to be noticeable in the appearance of Frost Bank Tower in Austin, Texas.

The globalist agenda is often associated with Zionism, although the proponents of these theories are quick to state that there is a difference between Jews and Zionists

“We also need to appreciate the difference between Jewish people as a race and Zionism which is a political movement. You don’t have to be Jewish to be a Zionist and many people who call themselves Zionists are not Jewish”

(Icke 1995:139)

The Star of David features quite heavily within Illuminati symbolism and it believed to be a Zionist symbol as opposed to a Jewish one. The Zionist/Jewish conspiracy originates from Victor Marsden’s book titled the The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion which is believed by some to be the minutes taken of a secret meeting of Jewish Conspiracists. This book is said to be a forgery.

“In 1864, a version of what eventually became known as the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion appeared in a French book entitled ‘Dialogue in Hell Between Machiavelli and Montesquieu, or the Politics of Machiavelli in the 19th Century by a Contemporary.’ The book was a political satire...The author...Joly was jailed for 15 months for writing this work”

Craig (2005:148)

Although many people still cite this work as truth others like Icke acknowledge it's potential as a forgery but see the Protocols as a prophetic work nevertheless, as the belief of a Zionist conspiracy looms large. The belief is that 2012 will be the catalyst for an event to forward the Zionist agenda. Conspiracy Theorist Ian R Crane is one of the proponents of this idea and he believes the evidence of symbolism is rife. In his talk Fool Me Once he states that the 2012 Olympic Games logo is proof of a Zionist conspiracy with the logo spelling out the end goal of 'Zion'. At the very least it can't be denied it's a fantastic coincidence.

CHAPTER 6: DO YOU WANT TO KNOW A SECRET?

It was suggested it would be of greater benefit to use a method that was familiar when conducting the primary research for this project, so the method used was an on-line quantitative survey and the questionnaires were posted on the independent Liverpool Football Club fans forum RedAndWhiteKop and the social networking website Facebook. After receiving 152 replies in just three days it felt like a sufficient amount of data for the research embarked upon and so the survey was locked and no further replies accepted. The questionnaire consisted of eight initial demographic determining questions followed by ten questions to establish the individual opinion of the participants. There were two further questions; number 19 questioned whether the respondent, after completing the questionnaire would, if given the opportunity change any of their answers, to which one clever respondent replied that they if they wanted to then they would just scroll back up the survey, unfortunately the question's futility was overlooked on the initial drawing up of the questionnaire, whilst question 20 was left open for any further views that may have occurred to the partaker when filling out the survey; The survey being in a multiple choice format limited the amount of options allowed, although in most cases a wide range of opinions were catered for.

The survey consisted of 152 respondents, 2 of these had answered their religion as Jedi, whilst this is recognised as an established religion there was a suspicion that these may be invalid, on closer inspection one had stated their nationality as Tatooinian, a fictional planet in Star Wars and that Return of the Jedi was their television news programme of choice so it was decided to omit his entire questionnaire from the final analysis, whilst the other 'Jedi' appeared to have completed the survey seriously so the questionnaire that they completed is included in the following analysis.

It was also revealed that there were two instances of two surveys sharing the same IP address, not wanting to have the data corrupted by duplicate data the rest of the four surveys were compared and it was deemed that in both instances they were filled in by different people, male and female, suggesting that it may have been two couples and although some data given was similar the answers showed enough disparity to suggest the validity of the four surveys.

This meant that of 151 valid participants 116 were male with the remaining 35 female, of these 106 were between the ages of 18-35 and 18 were between the ages of 36-53 with one participant aged between 54-61, the remaining six respondents were aged 17 or under. 146 were straight, with only 5 respondents being either homosexual or bi-sexual. 113 said they were British (anyone classing themselves as Welsh, English, Scouse, Scottish or Northern Irish have been re-classified as British), 17 Irish whilst the rest were made up from a variety of countries ranging from Sweden to Djibouti. All sides of the political spectrum appear to be represented as well as a good proportion of all the world's religions, unsurprisingly various factions of Christianity are in the majority although a massive 47 respondents claimed no religion at all; this is apart from those claiming Atheism who totaled 18 of the replies received. This field was left blank in the questionnaire as was the Nationality field allowing people to write what they were most comfortable with labeling themselves, so it may be that some of those claiming no religion are Spiritual or Atheist.

Questions 7 and 8 on the survey dealt with the media information the respondents subscribed to such as the newspapers read and news programmes they watched, in hindsight although this information has a function, it would more than likely relate to political ideals and so not give any great additional insight into the respondents answers, this coupled with the amount of variance in the data received resulted in the exclusion of this data from the final analysis, although this data is available to view in the hard copy surveys included in the appendix.

Whilst the following analysis will not cross-tabulate the answers given with the various demographics extrapolated this can be done at a later date with the information collated if desired. The idea of requesting demographical data was to ensure that there had been a good cross-section of people surveyed. The focus of the study is on establishing that public in general would want alleged conspiracy theories investigated in the mainstream media and in this respect the demographics of the people surveyed is of minor relevance.

The most compelling statistic found whilst conducting this investigation is that of the 151 people surveyed two-thirds when they were asked whether there were powers higher than government that controlled policy stated that they believed the statement to be either quite likely, very likely or a fact (See Fig 1 below).

In addition just 3% believed that the Media was completely unbiased and objective, with 80% the overwhelming majority believing that the information covered by the mainstream media is dictated to by either an established editorial policy or their parent corporations. 13% stated that the media were complicit in their following an elite agenda, whilst just 4% said they were unknowing puppets of the elite (see Fig 2).

The figures determined in the question relating to peoples perception of how the media are dealing with the current financial crisis (question 14 on the hard copy) are split fairly even, with 64 people judging the media coverage to be nothing more than scaremongering, 45 people believing that the crisis is being greatly underestimated by the media but most tellingly is that less than a third of the people surveyed saw the media's coverage as fair and balanced (see Fig 3).

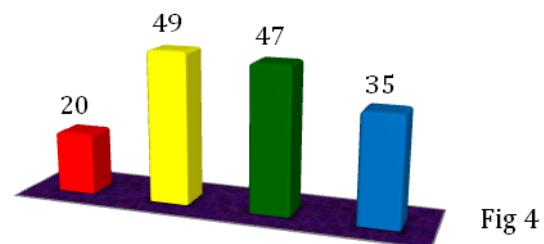

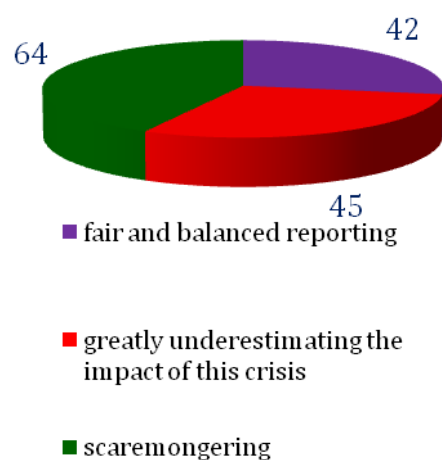

On the inference that the attacks on the World Trade Centre in 2001 had been masterminded by the Bush administration just 35 people responded that a western government would be incapable of such an act, 47 thought that they were capable but that they just didn't believe it applied in the instance of 9/11. A further 49 respondents felt that although they didn't believe that 9/11 was an 'inside job' there were still many questions that remained unanswered which they felt merited further investigation whilst 20 respondents believed that the American government were directly responsible for the events on that day (Fig 4).

9/11 was an inside job?

Media Coverage of Credit Crunch

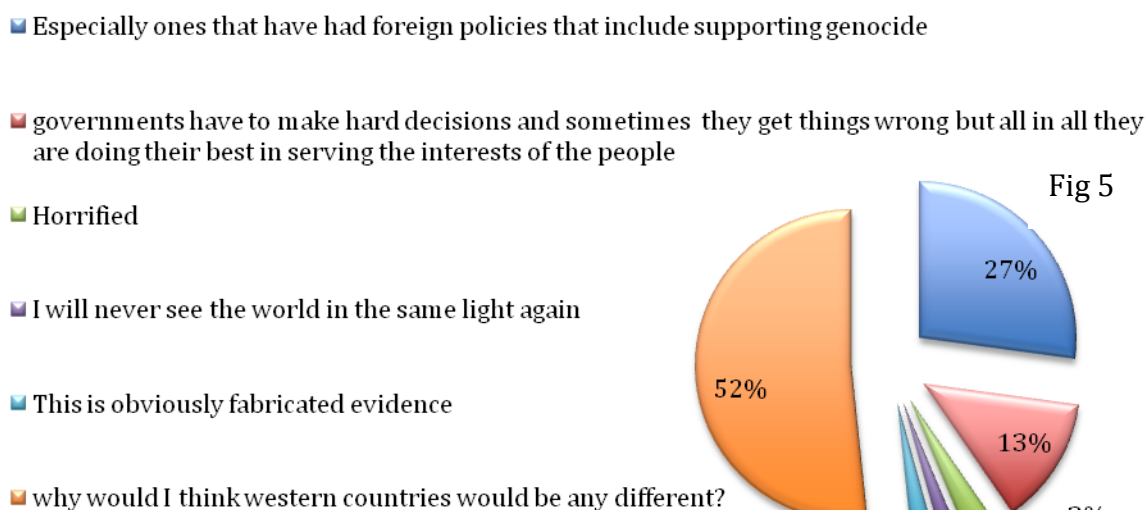

- I agree and there needs to be an investigation
- I disagree but there are still too many unanswered questions and there needs to be an investigation
- I disagree, although I do think they would be capable of such actions, I just don't think it applies here
- I disagree, no western administration would permit the deaths of their own innocent civilians, for any reason.

These results suggest a lack of trust in officialdom and the media at the very least. Whilst a sample of 151 does not constitute a clear indication of majority opinion, the broad scope of person canvassed within this small sample does not appear to produce any trends. Regardless of nationality, religion or political ideology there appeared to be no patterns emerging at all so as originally suspected the demographic data is largely irrelevant.

In an effort to see what people's opinion of western governments was, the final question linked to a video on You Tube showing the testimony of one of the victims of the infamous MK Ultra project as mentioned earlier, in it she describes her frightening ordeal under the C.I.A instigated program. The idea that as one respondent suggested in the feedback option in regards to some conspiracy theories being bound to be true and others which will be false and that in using the example of MK Ultra "using one theory to be representative of all others, either way round, [I was] missing that point" is nonsense as the intention of using the MK Ultra clip was merely to show what has been proven some government agencies are capable of which some people may not have thought anyone capable.

After watching You Tube video I had posted of an MK Ultra Victim detailing her ordeal

The pie chart (Fig 5) shows that after watching the You Tube clip 79% were unsurprised that such a programme would be used by a western government, 27% of those opted to show they were aware of the United States dubious foreign policy over the previous decades whilst 3% believed the evidence in the video was a complete fabrication, of course it cannot be verified whether any of the respondents actually watched the clip in full before answering this question, it just has to be taken on trust that they did. What is shocking is that just 5% found the testimony to be horrifying. Does this mean that the majority of the public are indifferent towards these phenomena?

A question was raised earlier on in the survey broaching the subject of how much basis in fact conspiracy theories as a whole have? (Fig 6) the findings show that only 11 of the 151 people who replied believed that they were complete fabrications without any basis in fact, the vast majority; 117 respondents believed they had some basis in fact with some believing they were valid but highly exaggerated and the remaining 23 believed they were valid and should be given more mainstream media attention. This marries with the result discussed earlier were over two thirds believed there was a higher power than that of government. These results point to a fairly significant interest in conspiracy theories being given proportionate coverage in the media, so it would be fair to estimate that the demand would match the interest, therefore it should tally that question 15 on the questionnaire dealing with 'I would like to see conspiracy theories investigated in the mainstream media' (Fig 7) and question 16 which points out that there is already a channel available on satellite television called Edge Media Television which actually deals specifically in ‘suppressed views’ and the question posed requests their opinion on there being such a channel (Fig 8) it would be safe to assume given the apparent interest expressed so far that the result should favour the trend to see more conspiracy subjects covered. The actual results are a little more complex with the vast majority of people willing to allow the channel its airtime so long as the subjects covered are factual, only two participants in the survey thought the channel was ridiculous and would fuel conspiracy, both of these respondents had answered that conspiracy theories were entirely fabricated in an earlier question. In regard to question 15 (Fig 7) nineteen people said they would not be interested in seeing conspiracy theories covered in the mainstream media, 74 decided they would be mildly interested whilst over a third said they would be interested or very interested.

Re: If the mainstream media covered more conspiracy related topics

EMTV REACTION

It would seem evident from the sample conducted that the majority of respondents are interested in the subject of conspiracy theories enough to welcome their inclusion via regular mainstream news mediums. A good deal of healthy skepticism is evident within the results also. If this survey had been conducted a decade earlier then it could be argued that the results would be dramatically different. It is likely that this change in perception, if there indeed is one has been influenced greatly by recent events such as the controversial U.S Presidential election in 2000, the horrific events of 11th September 2001, the subsequent misinformation preceding the war in Iraq and the recent global economic crisis.

Whilst the sample used does give a good indication of a general consensus of opinion and offers a broad spectrum of religious, political and national identities; if this research were to be taken further then it would be highly recommended to canvas a much larger sample. This would give a greater degree of integrity to the results elicited, although it would be my assertion that there would be little difference in the final outcome.

CHAPTER 7: CONCLUSION

Whilst the research conducted does span a large area of conspiracy theory this was necessary to give a good understanding of where these ideas come from and why these theories are so prolific in the public conscious at the moment. There is little doubt Dan Brown's bestselling fictional novels The Da Vinci Code and Angels and Demons along with their subsequent adaptations to the silver screen have played their part in the heights that conspiracy furor has reached through proliferation via the internet. It is evident from the results of the survey that, as the hypothesis declared: the masses do wish to be informed of conspiracy theories; what the findings do not show is why people are interested in conspiracy theories?

“On the one hand conspiracy stories are simple, understandable, and attractive to people seeking an explanation for their woes. Conspiracy theory is tempting too, because it preys on believer's weaknesses, including their excessive distrust of or cynicism about powerful institutions, as well as their stupidity and irrationality”

Fenster (2008:8)

Any further research may do well to take this into account as it is possible that people's main motive of interest for these types of theories is primarily for entertainment purposes, which if this were true would seriously put into question the findings contained here-in. There certainly seems to be a large amount of apathy amongst the public, along with the contradiction that the majority show a vehement lack of trust towards officialdom, especially in regard to the United States of America, although the questionnaire was weighted in terms of U.S politics and events, also the survey canvassed a majority of British and Irish participants with only one respondent claiming to be a U.S citizen, but it is near impossible to deny that almost anything involving the U.S socio-politically affects the rest of the world, as has been seen with the deliciously branded 'Credit Crunch'.

Interestingly the response from this one participant showed that he was between the age of 54 and 61, his political leanings were left-wing and he claimed to be of no religion, the feedback received was that he believed that it was a fact that there were higher powers than that of the state, that the media was controlled by its parent corporation and that the motive behind the current global crisis is to further the globalist agenda. Of course that's not to say had this survey received more American participants then this would have been the consensus, it's just intriguing that the only American canvassed appears to be of the opinion that there is a global conspiracy.

Another flaw in this research is that as can be established from the lack of participants over the age of 54, the American being the only person to fit into that category, it betrays its exclusivity to Internet users. The results may have been much different had the survey been conducted on the high street, therefore any future research should be spread over both the internet and high street in order to give those without access to the Internet and therefore those much less likely to have been subjected to dissident media more of an input.

In summation it is impossible to prove either one way or the other whether there is real cause for concern which was not the aim of this exercise but there does appear to be a reasonable doubt as to the motives of those people in power or whether they are in fact truly in power at all. It as also been shown that at the very least some sections of authority are willing to use nefarious, unethical and downright cruel methods in order to further their aims. Found within this examination of conspiracy theory were claims of false flag alien invasions, systematic poisoning of food supplies, holographic simulations of returns of religious prophets in order to bring about a one world religion, death camps and coffins being manufactured throughout the united states and a whole host of other fantastical theories.

Although as has been seen the people who are at the focus of these accusations do little to dissuade the public otherwise; at a Bilderberg meeting in 1991 David Rockefeller is credited with paying tribute to his media allies saying

“We are grateful to the Washington Post, the New York Times, Time magazine, and other great publications whose directors have attended our meetings and respected their promises of discretion for almost forty years. It would have been impossible for us to develop our plan for the world if we had been subject to the bright lights of publicity during these years. But the world is now more sophisticated and prepared to march towards a world government.”

Rockefeller (cited in electronic journal: Jasper. 2006)

The unfortunate truth is that there are far too many conspiracy theories interlinked. It was the aim of this dissertation to look at the conspiracy of an alleged plot to guide the world to a new world government as masterminded by a shadow elite going by the title The Illuminati to see whether there was any contemporary evidence to back up these assertions and to see whether there would be a public interest in this alleged plot being investigated in the mainstream media, and whilst on the surface it is a small segment of the conspiracy genre, in reality it pervades practically every other conspiracy theory that has been and as such it has been an immense display of willpower to merely focus on this one area when it was tempting to delve deeper into the various offshoots and suspected phenomena attributed to this shadowy elite. It would be wise for anybody who wished to carry on this research to focus on one of the many the Illuminati credited conspiracies or set aside the best part of three to five years in full commitment to exploring every branch of the permeation this alleged esoteric agenda resides in.
